Week 2

In the second week, we received their brief.

Story background

The old man in the video is competing with his son for the right to own the items of these old clothes. In his son's eyes, these clothes should have been thrown in the trash can long ago, and he even tore them up and did not want to give the old man any more. In the eyes of the old man, these clothes are not only good things in their material scarcity era, but also good memories of the past.

Our questions about your brief

- Do you have a budget for your idea that we need to respect?
- On the background slide, the last sentence is cut off, what did you mean to say?
- What do you mean with “enjoy chatting”?
- Can you explain to us better what you mean by the condition of poverty and elderly, so that we can better understand your target audience and the budget to be used for the project?

What do grandparents usually tell stories about? Does it refer to a textual story, such as a fairy tale, or does it refer to the grandparents' personal experience, or something else?

Answers to your questions (about our brief)

TURBO TEAM

TEAM 30

- We have introduced the card game "Scopa" in our brief to help you understand one of the typical games that connects grandparents and grandchild in Naples. We thought it could help you better understand the theme, as an example, but you don't necessarily have to use it in the project.
- Yes, the "Facilities" slide was requested to be included by our professor to help you understand which tools we could use in the design process, since we are not designers.
- Our grandparents love to talk a lot, especially with their grandchildren. They mainly tell personal stories from the past, both as lessons and as "life teachers" for the younger ones, but also just for companionship compared to their loneliness. Spending a lot of time alone, when they talk to someone, they vent a lot.

We are pleased that you enjoyed our brief, we also liked yours a lot. The topic is very interesting and it has made us think a lot! Good work :)
